6. Following an After a very pleasant interview with [redacted] during which the Junior Officer Training Program was outlined, arrangements were made to provide his office with specially qualified J.O.T.'s for temporary and permanent assignment, as seemed wise in each case.

7. A staff study is in progress to provide statistical information on all military J.O.T.'s on duty with the various Armed Services or with the Agency. Of serious import is the problem of how best to train the officers assigned to the Agency during the period remaining before their separation from the service. The fact that some of these men have expressed their intention not to request reinstatement in the Agency complicates the problem and is disturbing in assessing the true value of the OCS Program. While it is anticipated that this condition would develop in a number of cases, the imminence of the separation dates, the first of which will be in February 1954, brings this matter into sharp focus. There are now twenty of these men in various assignments. Each case is being studied on its individual merits and will be reported on in due course.
